Listening Journal:

You are required to listen to African-American popular music performed by African-American artists and record information about this music in a Listening Journal. The Journal should be divided into two sections. The first must cover music up to and including 1969 and the second music between 1970 and 1990. The Journal may be hand written but it must be well presented. The Journal will consist of separate entries for each song you listen to. In these entries, you should write about your personal feeling about each song. There must be no duplicates entries [i.e. same song by the same artist] as these entries will result in mark deductions. There must be a table of content and the pages must be numbered. The journal should explore a minimum of 150 songs and be at least 30 pages long. Entries should list factual data about each song, which may include, but is not limited to: artist name, song name, composer, release date, record label and chart peak position. Plagiarism, especially cut/paste from the Internet, will result in deductions of up to 100%. The journal should not contain songs played in class or any song listed in bold in the song book.

Journals are due at the end of class on June 3, 2007. Any journal submitted late will result in a minimum 10% deduction – no exceptions. If you are unable to submit your journal at the end of class, then it can be submitted to the Music Office at Accolade East Building 3rd Floor [Room 371]. Please ensure that any journal submitted at the Music Office is time stamped to prove the date it was submitted. Do not hand your journal to anyone but office staff. If you arrive at the Music Office when it is closed, do not slide your journal under doors or leave it in open areas. Make sure it is securely received by the staff in the Music Office.
